

Artistry

Written by Odinn

Thursday, 10 January 2008 11:01 - Last Updated Friday, 11 January 2008 10:26

Artistry

Artistry is a branch of crafting that focus on getting more out of you item through talent rather than technical know how. If you wish to gain further levels into Artistry you will need the appropriate techs. Below is a description of Artistry from thad and the tech requirements for the levels.

Artistry is born from within, brought to bear by your own inspiration and creativity. In certain ways, it is similar to Expertise, requiring persistent crafting and the exploration of new ideas to bring forward your creative force.

Just before you craft an item, you may choose to focus your study on Artistry instead of Expertise. If you do so, any Tech that you might gain from crafting that item will be allocated as an Artistry Tech instead of defaulting to Expertise. Note that gaining any Tech prevents all further Tech gain in either category for 18 hours.

This choice of focus allows you to advance in Expertise and Artistry separately, distributing your attention as you wish. Wise selection can be significant in your progress! Focusing on Artistry when you have already learned all that you can from a craft with regards to Artistry can "waste" a potential Tech if there had been something to learn in Expertise, and vice versa.

You may see a list of the Techs you have acquired with the 'quests action, crafting' command. Likewise, any Artistry levels that you gain will be permanently recorded in your quest log and can be viewed with the 'quests completed, crafting' command. Each successive level of Artistry requires a certain number of Techs, as follows (note that Artistry Techs and Expertise Techs are not interchangeable):

[Artistry level] > Artistry Techs required

[1] > 0	[5] > 36	[9] > 90
[2] > 6	[6] > 54	[10] > 99

Artistry

Written by Odinn

Thursday, 10 January 2008 11:01 - Last Updated Friday, 11 January 2008 10:26

[3] > 18 [7] > 63 [11] > 108
[4] > 27 [8] > 72 [12] > 12